Ford Co-operative Credit Society Limited - Australian Finance Directory
Ford Co-operative Credit Society Limited (FCCS) Credit Union was established in September 1974 by a small, dedicated group of employees of the Ford Motor Company in Geelong, to provide financial services to Geelong Ford employees and their families. During 1984 FCCS Credit Union merged with the Ford Broadmeadows Employee Credit Union. In 1985 a branch was opened at the Sydney plant of Ford Motor Company. During 1990 a further merger occurred with a Geelong based Credit Union called Commercial Credit Co-operative Ltd. With this merger their membership was no longer restricted to Ford Employees and their families. FCCS exists to provide a "Better Banking Alternative" through an up-to-date range of competitive financial products and services professionally delivered to all its members. Some of the products and services are loans (car, personal and home), insurances (landlord, car, travel, CTP, home, contents, boat, caravan, mortgage and loan repayment), saving account and financial planning. FCCS is proud to be a member of the Customer Owned Banking Association (COBA), the new national body for Australia's customer owned banking institutions. FCCS Credit Union has continued to grow and prosper with many of their members spread all over Australia sharing in the different kind of banking that FCCS offers. In fact 90% of their members and their total deposit funds are held by members from the local and wider community. With a mission to provide financial products and services that return value to members, workplaces and the local community. Now it aims to be the primary institution meeting the personal financial services needs of its members.
